A Message From Marla

Hello Summer!

Now how can your skin survive?

The skin is your body's most prominent organ...
So it's essential you take care of it, especially during the summertime when UV levels can wreak havoc on exposed skin. While those killer rays may feel sensational, the effects of sun exposure may not be as agreeable over time. The National Institute on Aging has pointed to sunlight as a major culprit of wrinkles, dryness, and age spots.

The best way to avoid trouble? Block harmful rays when you're out during the day; even during cloudy days use sun protection. Sun rays can penetrate light clouds, mist, and fog. The danger exists in all seasons, and the damage builds up each year.
WEAR YOUR SUNSCREEN! Not sure what to use? I'll help you find the right one for your lifestyle and skin type!
